

Spring 2021 Superintendent Survey

Computer Applications is a high school academic contest that requires competitors to have a thorough working knowledge of Microsoft Office programs. Over the past ten years, participation in Computer Applications has steadily declined. Factors cited by school personnel as contributing to low participation include: lack of student interest, difficulty finding teachers to coach the event, school districts adopting technology that is not compatible with the contest (such as Chromebooks and Google Suite), and business competition opportunities with other organizations that are more applicable to courses being taught.

Q1: Based on this information, would you be in favor of UIL phasing out the Computer Applications Contest over the next two to three years?
